

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

JESSIE VERDUN,

Plaintiff,

v.

FIDELITY CREDITOR SERVICE and DOES 1-10,

Defendants.

Case No.: 14-cv-0036-DHB

ORDER DENYING PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT (ECF No.
36) AND SUA SPONTE GRANTING PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT IN FAVOR OF DEFENDANT

I. INTRODUCTION

Pending before the Court is Plaintiff Jessie Verdun's ("Plaintiff") motion for summary judgment. (ECF No. 36.) In his complaint, Plaintiff alleges claims arising out of Defendant Fidelity Creditor Service's ("Defendant") demand for interest on Plaintiff's debt and summarization of California Civil Code section 1788.21 in a debt collection letter sent to Plaintiff. However, in his motion for summary judgment, Plaintiff only addresses the inclusion of section 1788.21 in the debt collection letter. Therefore, the Court construes Plaintiff's motion as a motion for partial summary judgment.

The parties consented to proceed before a United States Magistrate Judge pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(c). (ECF Nos. 18, 19.) For the reasons set forth below, Plaintiff's motion for partial summary judgment is DENIED, and partial summary judgment is sua sponte granted in favor of Defendant.

II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The facts giving rise to Plaintiff's claims are undisputed. (ECF No. 36-1 at 5; ECF No. 38-2 at 3.)<sup>1</sup> Plaintiff failed to pay a bill for medical services he received from Cardiology Associates Medical. (ECF No. 36-1 at 9; ECF No. 36-3 at 2; ECF No. 38-2 at 2.) Plaintiff's account was assigned to Defendant, a licensed collection agency, for collection. (ECF No. 36-3 at 2.) On July 27, 2013, Defendant sent Plaintiff a collection letter regarding his outstanding medical debt in an attempt to collect on that debt. (ECF No. 36-1 at 5, 9; ECF No. 38-2 at 2.) The letter stated,

The Rosenthal Act, California Civil Code Section 1788.21, requires that within a reasonable time you notify your creditor or prospective creditor of any change in your name, address, or employment, if and only if the creditor clearly and conspicuously in writing disclosed such responsibility to you.

(ECF No. 36-3 at 2.)

III. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Plaintiff filed a complaint against Defendant on January 6, 2014, arguing that Defendant violated the Federal Debt Collections Practices Act ("FDCPA"), 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692 et seq., and its state equivalent, the Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act ("Rosenthal Act"), California Civil Code §§ 1788 et seq., by including in its debt collection letter a summary of California Civil Code section 1788.21 ("section 1788.21"). (ECF No. 1.) On April 14, 2016, Plaintiff filed a motion for partial summary judgment. (ECF No. 36.) Defendant failed to timely oppose Plaintiff's motion, and Plaintiff filed a reply in support of its motion for partial summary judgment on May 13, 2016. (ECF No. 37.) On May 17, 2016, Defendant filed an ex parte motion to shorten time and for acceptance of Defendant's untimely opposition to Plaintiff's partial summary judgment motion. (ECF No. 38.) Defendant attached its opposition brief as an exhibit to its motion. (ECF No. 38-

---

<sup>1</sup> The pages cited refer to the page numbers assigned by the Court's Electronic Case Filing System.

2.) The Court then granted Defendant's ex parte motion, and Defendant's opposition was deemed filed as of May 17, 2016. (ECF No. 40.) Plaintiff filed a reply in support of his motion for partial summary judgment on June 1, 2016. (ECF No. 43.)

Plaintiff subsequently filed a notice of recent decision highlighting an Eleventh Circuit opinion on the issue of Article III standing in FDCPA cases following the Supreme Court's ruling in Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540 (2016). (ECF No. 46.) Defendant filed a response to Plaintiff's notice of recent decision on July 13, 2016. (ECF No. 47.)

IV. LEGAL STANDARD

Summary judgment is appropriate under Rule 56(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure when the moving party demonstrates the absence of a genuine issue of material fact and entitlement to judgment as a matter of law. See FED. R. CIV. P. 56(c); Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986). Where, as here, "the material facts are undisputed and resolution of a motion for summary judgment turns on a question of law . . . the court is left with the obligation to resolve the legal dispute between the parties as a matter of law." Gulf Ins. Co. v. First Bank, No. CIV S-08-209, 2009 WL 1953444, at *2 (E.D. Cal. July 7, 2009) (citing Asuncion v. Dist. Dir. of U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Serv., 427 F.2d 523, 524 (9th Cir. 1970)); see also Int'l Ass'n of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Dist. 776 v. Texas Steel Co., 538 F.2d 1116, 1119 (5th Cir. 1976) (citing Asuncion, 427 F.2d at 524) ("It is axiomatic that where questions of law alone are involved in a case, summary judgment is appropriate.")

V. DISCUSSION

A. Standing

In Defendant's opposition to Plaintiff's motion for partial summary judgment, Defendant argues that Plaintiff did not establish Article III standing as required to invoke the subject matter jurisdiction of this Court because Plaintiff has not suffered a concrete injury. (ECF 38-2 at 6.)

///

///

1                   1.      Legal Standard

2           “Federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction.” Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins.
 3 Co. of Am., 511 U.S. 375, 377 (1994). Anyone seeking “to invoke the jurisdiction of the 4 federal courts must satisfy the threshold requirement imposed by Article III of the 5 Constitution by alleging an actual case or controversy.” City of L.A. v. Lyons, 461 U.S. 95, 6 101 (1983). Standing is an “essential and unchanging part of the case-or-controversy 7 requirement of Article III.” Lujan v. Defs. of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560 (1992). To 8 establish standing, a plaintiff must demonstrate (1) an “injury in fact,” (2) that is fairly 9 traceable to the challenged conduct of the defendant, and (3) likely to be redressed by a 10 favorable judicial decision. Id. at 560–61.

11           It is well settled that an injury in fact is “an invasion of a legally protected interest 12 which is (a) concrete and particularized . . . and (b) actual or imminent, not conjectural or 13 hypothetical . . . .” Id. at 560. An injury is particularized if it affects the plaintiff in a 14 personal and individual way. Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1548 (2016). An 15 injury is concrete if it is “‘de facto,’ that is, it must actually exist.” Id.

16                   2.      Parties’ Arguments

17           Defendant argues that under the recent Supreme Court decision, Spokeo, Inc. v.
 18 Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540 (2016), Plaintiff lacks Article III standing because he suffered no 19 concrete injury as a result of receiving Defendant’s debt collection letter. (ECF No. 38-2 20 at 6.) Defendant contends that Plaintiff suffered no injury because he did not rely on the 21 letter or send his contact information to Defendant in response to the letter. Id. Rather, 22 Defendant asserts that Plaintiff took no action after receiving the letter. Id. Even if the letter 23 technically violated the FDCPA and Rosenthal Act, Defendant argues that Plaintiff cannot 24 establish standing because he suffered no harm and alleging a statutory violation that 25 caused no harm is insufficient to establish standing.<sup>2</sup>

---

26
 27 28 <sup>2</sup> Plaintiff alleges a violation of the more general FDCPA section 1692e and the more specific section 1692e(10). Section 1692e states that “[a] debt collector may not use any

1 Plaintiff counters that he asserted a concrete injury because he “alleged more than a 2 bare procedural violation.” (ECF No. 43 at 10.) Plaintiff argues that he alleged receiving a 3 false and misleading letter in violation of the FDCPA, which is an intangible harm as 4 determined by Congress and thus a concrete injury. Id. at 8–10. Plaintiff further asserts that 5 he suffered a concrete injury because he was confused by the letter and thus contacted and 6 paid a lawyer to clarify his legal obligations regarding the debt. Id. at 11.

7 3. Analysis

8 In Spokeo,<sup>3</sup> the Supreme Court held that a plaintiff asserting a claim based on a 9 statutory violation must still demonstrate a concrete injury to establish standing. Spokeo, 10 Inc. v. Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549 (2016) (“Article III standing requires a concrete injury 11 even in the context of a statutory violation.”). The Court noted that intangible injuries may 12

---

14 false, deceptive, or misleading representation or means in connection with the collection 15 of any debt.” 15 U.S.C. § 1692e. Section 1692(e)(10) deems “[t]he use of any false 16 representation or deceptive means to collect or attempt to collect any debt or to obtain information concerning a consumer” a violation of section 1692e. Id. § 1692e(10).

17 <sup>3</sup>Spokeo involved allegations that the defendant-consumer reporting agency had violated 18 the Fair Credit Reporting Act (“FCRA”), 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681 et seq., by providing 19 inaccurate information about the plaintiff on its “people search engine” website. Spokeo, 20 Inc. v. Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1544 (2016). The plaintiff filed a putative class action suit against the defendant-consumer reporting agency, alleging the defendant had violated the FCRA by reporting these inaccuracies. Id.

21 The district court dismissed plaintiff’s complaint for lack of standing, and the Ninth 22 Circuit reversed, finding that the plaintiff had alleged that his statutory rights had been 23 violated and that he has a personal, individualized interest in the handling of his credit 24 information. Id. The Supreme Court then granted certiorari. The Supreme Court vacated the Ninth Circuit’s opinion, holding that the Ninth Circuit had failed to determine whether 25 the alleged procedural violations of the FCRA gave rise to harm sufficient to establish a concrete injury for Article III standing purposes. Id. at 1550. The Court did not opine as 26 to whether the violations at issue resulted in a concrete injury. Id. The Court did, however, provide some guidance as to what kinds of statutory violations cause no concrete injury.
27 Id. For instance, the Court noted that it was unlikely that the dissemination of an inaccurate 28 zip code would create concrete harm required for Article III standing. Id.

1 be concrete and explained that “[i]n determining whether an intangible harm constitutes 2 injury in fact, both history and the judgment of Congress play important roles.” Id.

3 The Court deemed Congress’s judgment in identifying through statute intangible 4 harms that meet Article III’s standing requirements as “instructive and important.” Id.
5 However, the Court stated that a plaintiff does not automatically establish a concrete injury 6 by citing a statute that grants a right and authorizes suit to vindicate that right. Id. A bare 7 procedural violation that results in no harm does not satisfy the injury-in-fact requirement 8 of Article III. Id. “This does not mean, however, that the risk of real harm cannot satisfy 9 the requirement of concreteness.” Id. Therefore, in some circumstances, alleging a harm 10 identified by Congress through statute will be enough to establish an injury in fact. Id.

11 Since Spokeo, the Ninth Circuit has not yet considered whether a violation of the 12 FDCPA establishes a concrete harm sufficient to confer Article III standing. However, the 13 Eleventh Circuit and many district courts across the country have examined this issue.

14 In California, several district courts have considered whether plaintiffs who alleged 15 statutory violations of the FDCPA suffered concrete injuries. In Munoz v. California 16 Business Bureau, Inc., the plaintiff-individual incurred medical debt that was later assigned 17 to the defendant-debt collector for collection. No. 15-cv-01345, 2016 WL 6517655, at *1 18 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 1, 2016). The defendant-debt collector sued the plaintiff in California state 19 court to recover on the debt, and the plaintiff hired legal counsel. Id. at *1. Pursuant to a 20 stipulated settlement agreement, the plaintiff agreed to pay the debt, and the defendant-21 debt collector subsequently sent the plaintiff two demand letters to collect the settlement 22 amount. Id. at *2. The plaintiff then sued the defendant-debt collector for violating the 23 FDCPA by sending demand letters to the plaintiff while he was represented by counsel and 24 misrepresenting the amount of money owed under the settlement agreement. Id. The 25 defendant-debt collector argued that the plaintiff had not suffered an injury in fact and thus 26 lacked standing to sue. Id. at *5.

27 The district court in Munoz held that the plaintiff had established a concrete injury 28 sufficient for Article III standing purposes. Id. at *5. The Court noted generally that the

1 harmful practices identified by Congress and prohibited under the FDCPA are concrete 2 injuries. Id. Then, the court identified as the plaintiff's specific concrete injuries: (1) being 3 contacted by a debt collector who was aware that the plaintiff was represented by counsel, 4 and (2) receiving from the debt collector a letter attempting to collect more money than 5 was owed. Id.

6 Similarly, in Tourgeman v. Collins Financial Services, the court examined whether 7 mailing a debt collection letter that allegedly violated the FDCPA established a concrete 8 injury on behalf of the intended recipient. 197 F. Supp. 3d 1205 (S.D. Cal. 2016). In 9 Tourgeman, the defendant-law firm sent the plaintiff-individual a letter in an attempt to 10 recover money the plaintiff owed to one of the law firm's clients. Id. at 1207. The plaintiff 11 never actually received the letter; instead, it was discovered after the plaintiff had initiated 12 suit against the defendant-law firm. Id. at 1208. Nonetheless, the plaintiff argued that the 13 defendant-law firm had violated the FDCPA because the letter erroneously identified the 14 wrong original creditor and was signed by an attorney who was not meaningfully involved 15 in the case. Id. The district court held that because the plaintiff had not received the letter 16 until after the suit commenced, he had not suffered a concrete injury and lacked standing 17 to pursue his FDCPA claims based on the letter. Id. at 1209. The court did note, however, 18 that if the plaintiff had received the letter, that could suffice to demonstrate Article III 19 standing "even if [receipt of the letter] did not result in detrimental actions on the part of 20 the plaintiff." Id.

21 In Horowitz v. GC Services Limited Partnership, another California district court 22 held that plaintiffs who received debt collection voicemails that violated the FDCPA had 23 suffered concrete injuries for purposes of Article III standing. No. 14-cv-2512, 2016 WL 24 7188238, at *5–6 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 12, 2016). In Horowitz, one plaintiff-individual 25 ("Plaintiff Horowitz") received a voicemail from the defendant-debt collector. Id. at *1.
26 The defendant-debt collector was calling in regards to debt that belonged to a person 27 previously associated with the telephone number, Plaintiff Hamby. Id. The defendant-debt 28 collector left a voicemail, but did not identify itself as a collection agency or state that the

1 purpose of the call was to collect debt. Id. Plaintiff Horowitz and Hamby filed suit against 2 the defendant-debt collector alleging, in part, the defendant-debt collector violated the 3 FDCPA by leaving the voicemail. Id. at *2. The defendant-debt collector argued that the 4 plaintiffs lacked standing. Id. at *3.

5 The district court held, in relevant part, that both plaintiffs had alleged concrete 6 injuries for purposes of Article III standing. Id. at *5. The court found that Plaintiff 7 Horowitz had established a concrete injury because he received the voicemail, spent time 8 returning the call, and used cell phone plan minutes in order to do so. Id. The court also 9 found that Plaintiff Hamby, who never received the voicemail, had established a concrete 10 injury sufficient for standing purposes. Id. at *7. Because the defendant-debt collector 11 believed it was leaving a voicemail for Plaintiff Hamby, the court found the defendant-debt 12 collector had created a material risk of harm that Plaintiff Hamby would be informed of 13 the message and deceived by it. Id. The Court noted that a material risk of harm can suffice 14 to demonstrate an injury in fact for standing purposes. Id.

15 The Eleventh Circuit and district courts in other states have also considered whether 16 FDCPA violations cause concrete injuries for purposes of Article III standing. These courts 17 have answered in the affirmative. In doing so, these courts have distinguished Spokeo and 18 held that Congress created the FDCPA to protect consumers from harmful debt collection 19 practices thereby elevating FDCPA violations to cognizable, concrete injuries for Article 20 III purposes. See Church v. Accretive Health, Inc., 654 F. App'x. 990, 994 (11th Cir. 2016); 21 Bautz v. ARS Nat'l Servs., Inc., No. 16-768, 2016 WL 7422301, at *11–12 (E.D.N.Y. Dec.
22 23, 2016); Saenz v. Buckeye Check Cashing of Ill., No. 16-6052, 2016 WL 5080747, at *2
23 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 20, 2016); Hill v. Accounts Receivable Servs., LLC, No. 16-219, 2016 WL 24 6462119, at *4–5 (D. Minn. Oct. 31, 2016).

25 In Church v. Accretive Health, Inc., the Eleventh Circuit considered whether a 26 plaintiff-individual had suffered a concrete injury upon receiving a debt collection letter 27 that failed to include certain disclosures required by the FDCPA. 654 F. App'x. 990, 992– 28 95 (11th Cir. 2016). The court held that the plaintiff had alleged a concrete injury because

1 she did not receive disclosures to which she was entitled. Id. The court explained that 2 although the plaintiff's injury "may not have resulted in tangible economic or physical 3 harm that courts often expect," harms need not be tangible to be concrete. Id. The court 4 further found the plaintiff's injury was "one that Congress has elevated to the status of a 5 legally cognizable injury through the FDCPA," and was based on a substantive right, which 6 is distinguishable from the pure statutory violation alleged in Spokeo. Id.

7 The District Court for the Eastern District of New York has also considered whether 8 a plaintiff who alleged a violation of section 1692e of the FDCPA, which is one of the 9 statutes at issue in this action, suffered a concrete injury sufficient to establish Article III 10 standing. Bautz v. ARS Nat'l Servs., Inc., No. 16-768, 2016 WL 7422301, at *7–12
 11 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 23, 2016). The court held that section 1692e is a substantive legal right 12 conferred by Congress through statute, and an alleged violation of that statute is substantive 13 violation, not a procedural violation as was alleged in Spokeo. Id. at *8–12. The court 14 further found that an alleged violation of a substantive right is sufficient to confer standing 15 because infringement of a substantive right is a concrete injury. Id.

16 Other district courts have similarly found standing where an FDCPA violation was 17 alleged. See Saenz v. Buckeye Check Cashing of Ill., No. 16-6052, 2016 WL 5080747, at 18 *2 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 20, 2016) (holding that a plaintiff who had received a misleading debt 19 collection letter that allegedly violated the FDCPA had suffered a concrete harm "defined 20 and made cognizable by statute," sufficient for Article III standing); Hill v. Accounts
 21 Receivable Servs., LLC, No. 16-219, 2016 WL 6462119, at *5 (D. Minn. Oct. 31, 2016)
 22 ("[Defendant]'s alleged violations of [Plaintiff]'s rights [under the FDCPA] to truthful 23 information and freedom from efforts to collect unauthorized debt constitute an injury in 24 fact.").

25 This Court concurs that an alleged violation of the FDCPA is a substantive violation 26 that gives rise to a concrete injury for purposes of Article III standing. Congress created 27 the FDCPA to protect consumers from harmful debt collection practices. In doing so, 28 Congress provided consumers with the legally protected right to be free from these harmful practices. The statutes at issue here protect consumers from receiving false and deceptive communications that attempt to collect debt or obtain consumer information. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692e, 1692e(10). The violation of these sections infringes upon substantive—not procedural—rights and creates a real risk of harm to consumers. Thus, this action is distinguishable from Spokeo, where the Supreme Court spoke to procedural statutory violations that would not likely result in harm, like the dissemination of an incorrect zip code. See Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549 (2016).

Here, Plaintiff alleges that he was harmed as a result of receiving Defendant’s misleading debt collection letter because the letter created false impressions that Plaintiff had to give information about himself to Defendant and that Defendant was his creditor. These are concrete harms defined and made cognizable by Congress through statute. Plaintiff further established that he suffered concrete injuries by alleging that the letter left him confused and caused him to expend funds to hire an attorney to clarify his legal obligations. These harms are unlike the bare procedural violations mentioned in Spokeo. Rather, the misrepresentation of Plaintiff’s debt-related obligations violates his substantive right as a consumer to be free from harmful debt collection practices. It also creates a real risk of harm that Plaintiff, as a consumer, will be deceived and the choices that he makes in response to the communication will be affected. Therefore, the Court finds that Plaintiff sufficiently alleged that he suffered a concrete injury for purposes of Article III standing.

B. FDCPA

1. Legal Standard

The FDCPA imposes requirements on debt collectors by regulating the manner in which a debt collector may contact a debtor. See Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer, & Ulrich LPA, 559 U.S. 573, 576 (2010); Rowe v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 559 F.3d 1028, 1031 (9th Cir. 2009). “[T]he purpose of the FDCPA is to protect consumers broadly from improper practices and the statute is to be interpreted liberally for this purpose.” Riley v. Giguere, 631 F. Supp. 2d 1295, 1305 (E.D. Cal. 2009) (citing Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Servs., Inc., 460 F.3d 1162, 1171, 1175 (9th Cir. 2006)). The

1 FDCPA is a strict liability statute that “makes debt collectors liable for violations that are 2 not knowing or intentional.” Donohue v. Quick Collect, Inc., 592 F.3d 1027, 1030 (9th Cir.
 3 2010) (internal quotation and citation omitted). “Proof of actual damages is not required 4 for recovery under the FDCPA.” Baker v. G.C. Servs. Corp., 677 F.2d 775, 781 (9th Cir.
 5 1982).

6 To state a claim under the FDCPA, a plaintiff must show that: (1) he is a consumer 7 under 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(3); (2) the debt arises out of a transaction entered into for personal 8 purposes; (3) the defendant is a debt collector under 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6); and (4) the 9 defendant violated one of the provisions of the FDCPA. Wheeler v. Premiere Credit of 10 North America, LLC, 80 F. Supp. 3d 1108, 1112 (S.D. Cal. 2015). Only the fourth prong—11 whether Defendant violated a provision of the FDCPA—is at issue here. (ECF No. 36-1 at 12 8–9; ECF No. 38-2 at 2–3.)

13 Violations of the FDCPA are evaluated using the least sophisticated debtor standard.
 14 Davis v. Hollins Law, 832 F.3d 962, 964 (9th Cir. 2016). “Whether conduct violates [§ 15 1692e] . . . requires an objective analysis that takes into account whether the ‘least 16 sophisticated debtor would likely be misled by a communication.’” Donohue v. Quick 17 Collect, Inc., 592 F.3d 1027, 1030 (9th Cir. 2010) (citing Guerrero v. RJM Acquisitions 18 LLC, 499 F.3d 926, 934 (9th Cir. 2007)). The least sophisticated debtor standard is “lower 19 than simply examining whether particular language would deceive or mislead a reasonable 20 debtor.” Swanson v. S. Oregon Credit Serv., Inc., 869 F.2d 1222, 1227 (9th Cir. 1988).
 21 “The standard is ‘designed to protect consumers of below average sophistication or 22 intelligence,’ or those who are ‘uninformed or naive,’ particularly when those individuals 23 are targeted by debt collectors.” Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Servs., LLC, 660 F.3d 1055, 1061– 24 62 (9th Cir. 2011) (quoting Duffy v. Landberg, 215 F.3d 871, 874–75 (8th Cir. 2000)).

25 Violations must also be material for a plaintiff to prevail on a FDCPA claim.
 26 Misrepresentations that are not material are not likely to mislead the least sophisticated 27 debtor and therefore are not actionable. Donohue, 592 F.3d at 1033–34. (“In assessing 28 FDCPA liability, we are not concerned with mere technical falsehoods that mislead no one,

1 but instead with genuinely misleading statements that may frustrate a consumer's ability to 2 intelligently choose his or her response.”)

3 2. Parties’ Arguments

4 Plaintiff alleges that Defendant violated two provisions of the FDCPA, 15 U.S.C. § 5 1692e (“section 1692e”) and 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(10) (“section 1692e(10)”), by including in 6 its letter to Plaintiff language summarizing section 1788.21 of the California Civil Code.
7 (ECF No. 36-1 at 8, 17, 19.)

8 Section 1692e states that “[a] debt collector may not use any false, deceptive, or 9 misleading representation or means in connection with the collection of any debt.”<sup>4</sup> 15 10 U.S.C. § 1692e. Section 1692e(10) similarly prohibits “[t]he use of any false representation 11 or deceptive means to collect or attempt to collect any debt or to obtain information 12 concerning a consumer.” Id. § 1692e(10).

13 First, Plaintiff contends that Defendant’s recitation of section 1788.21 in the letter 14 violates sections 1692e and 1692e(10) of the FDCPA because the language deceptively 15 creates the impression that Plaintiff has the obligation to send updated contact information 16 to Defendant when no such obligation exists and was included in an attempt to obtain that 17 information. (ECF No. 36-1 at 11–16.) Second, Plaintiff asserts that Defendant’s inclusion 18 of section 1788.21 in the letter violates sections 1692e and 1692e(10) because it misleads
19 the least sophisticated debtor into believing that Defendant is a creditor rather than a debt 20 collector. Id.

21 In opposition, Defendant argues that it did not violate section 1692e by including in 22 its letter to Plaintiff a summary of section 1788.21.<sup>5</sup> Defendant contends that it is required 23

---

24
25 <sup>4</sup> Section 1692e goes on to list conduct that is a violation “without limiting the general 26 application” of the statute. 15 U.S.C. § 1692e.

27 <sup>5</sup> In its opposition, Defendant argues that it did not violate section 1692e and makes no 28 arguments specific to section 1692e(10). This is likely due to the confusing nature of Plaintiff’s pleadings as Plaintiff argues generally that Defendant’s actions violated the FDCPA without distinguishing between sections 1692e and 1692e(10) in his argument.

1 to advise Plaintiff of certain legal requirements and therefore provided an accurate 2 restatement of section 1788.21 in the letter. (ECF No. 38-2 at 4.) Defendant notes that 3 section 1692e prohibits “false, deceptive, [and] misleading representation[s],” but asserts 4 that the letter is not false because it does not misstate section 1788.21, “is not deceptive 5 because the letter does not use deception to get paid[,] . . . and is not misleading because it 6 does not mislead the Plaintiff in order to obtain payment.” Id. Defendant therefore asserts 7 that it did not violate the FDCPA.

8 In reply, Plaintiff argues that a true statement can still be deemed misleading under 9 the FDCPA. (ECF No. 43 at 6–7 (citing Gonzalez v. Arrow Fin. Servs., LLC, 660 F.3d 10 1055, 1059 (9th Cir. 2011)).

11 3. Analysis

12 Here, Defendant included in its letter to Plaintiff a sentence summarizing section 13 1788.21 of the California Civil Code. The sentence read,

14 The Rosenthal Act, California Civil Code Section 1788.21, 15 requires that within a reasonable time you notify your creditor or 16 prospective creditor of any change in your name, address, or 17 employment, if and only if the creditor clearly and conspicuously in writing disclosed such responsibility to you.

18 (ECF No. 36-3 at 2.)

19 Section 1788.21 actually reads,

20 (a) In connection with any consumer credit existing or requested 21 to be extended to a person, such person shall within a reasonable 22 time notify the creditor or prospective creditor of any change in such person’s name, address, or employment.

23 (b) Each responsibility set forth in subdivision (a) shall apply 24 only if and after the creditor clearly and conspicuously in writing 25 discloses such responsibility to such person.

26
 27 28 (See ECF No. 36-1 at 16, 19.) While the Court takes note of this, it has no effect on the Court’s ultimate decision.

1 A debt collector does not violate the FDCPA by including in a debt collection letter 2 an accurate, relevant statement of law. See Anderson v. Credit Collection Servs., 322 F.
3 Supp. 2d 1094, 1097–99 (S.D. Cal. 2004); Robbins v. Wolpoff & Abramson LLP, 422 F.
4 Supp. 2d 1011, 1013–15 (E.D. Wis. 2006). In Anderson v. Credit Collection Services, a 5 plaintiff-individual received from the defendant-debt collection agency a debt collection 6 letter that cited section 1692c(b) of the FDCPA. 322 F. Supp. 2d 1094, 1095–96 (S.D. Cal.
7 2004). The plaintiff filed suit against the defendant-debt collector claiming that the 8 statutory reference in the letter was false, deceptive, and misleading because it implied 9 “that legal action w[ould] soon commence.” Id. at 1096. The district court disagreed and 10 held that the defendant-debt collector had not violated the FDCPA by including statutory 11 language in its debt collection letter. Id. at 1099. The court explained that an accurate and 12 complete statutory citation does not violate the FDCPA and thus deemed the plaintiff’s 13 argument to be “without merit.” Id. at 1098.

14 Similarly, in Robbins v. Wolpoff & Abramson LLP, a defendant-debt collector sent 15 the plaintiff-individual a debt collection letter that “tracked, with only minor additions and 16 variations, the entire text of [FDCPA] § 1692g.” 422 F. Supp. 2d 1011, 1012–13 (E.D.
17 Wis. 2006). The plaintiff filed suit against the defendant-debt collector arguing that the 18 inclusion of the statutory language violated the FDCPA because it was confusing and 19 discouraged “an unsophisticated consumer from knowing and exercising her or his rights.”
20 Id. at 1012. The district court granted the defendant-debt collector’s motion to dismiss, 21 holding that a debt collection letter that includes “identical or closely paraphrased statutory 22 language”—absent more—“cannot state a claim for confusion as a matter of law.” Id. at 23 1015.

24 Although not precedential, the Court also notes that the Ninth Circuit has held, in an 25 unpublished decision, that a debt collector does not violate the FDCPA by including in a 26 debt collection letter paraphrased language explaining the obligations that section 27 1788.21(a) imposes on a debtor. Van v. Grant & Weber, 308 F. App’x 46, 48 (9th Cir.
28 2008). In Van, the plaintiff-debtor filed suit against the defendant-debt collector alleging

1 that the defendant-debt collector had violated the FDCPA by including in a collection letter 2 language stating, “[t]he Rosenthal Act, California Civil Code Section 1788.21, also 3 requires that you notify your creditor of your change of name, address, or employment for 4 any existing consumer credit.” Id. at 47. The district court granted summary judgment in 5 favor of the defendant-debt collector, and the plaintiff appealed. The Ninth Circuit affirmed 6 the district court’s decision, holding that “because the letter did no more than explain the 7 obligations California Civil Code § 1788.21(a) imposed upon [the plaintiff], without 8 misconstruing the meaning of the section,” the defendant-debt collector had not used any 9 “false, deceptive, or misleading representation[s] . . . or any unfair or unconscionable 10 means to collect . . . debt” under the FDCPA. Id. at 48.

11 Here, the Court finds that Defendant’s summary of section 1788.21 in the letter sent 12 to Plaintiff is an accurate representation of the law. Defendant’s letter only slightly 13 modifies the statutory language of section 1788.21. In no way does Defendant’s letter 14 change the meaning of section 1788.21. Instead, Defendant’s letter truthfully explains 15 section 1788.21’s requirements in a way that is easier to understand than the actual 16 statutory language. The Court concurs with Anderson v. Credit Collection Services, 322 F.
17 Supp. 2d 1094 (S.D. Cal. 2004) and Robbins v. Wolpoff & Abramson LLP, 422 F. Supp.
18 2d 1011 (E.D. Wis. 2006), and finds that including in a debt collection letter an accurate 19 statement of law—with nothing more to change its meaning—is not false, misleading, or 20 deceptive, and therefore does not violate the FDCPA. Therefore, Defendant did not violate 21 the FDCPA by including in its debt collection letter an accurate summary of section 22 1788.21.

23 Plaintiff cites to Gonzales v. Arrow Financial Services, LLC, 660 F.3d 1055, 1059
24 (9th Cir. 2011) for the proposition that a truthful statement can nonetheless be misleading 25 and violate the FDCPA. (ECF No. 43, pg. 6–7.) Plaintiff’s argument, however, is 26 unpersuasive as Gonzales is highly distinguishable from the instant action. In Gonzales, 27 the defendant-debt collector included in a debt collection letter conditional language 28 implying a threat to take action against the plaintiff-individual that could not legally be

1 taken. Id. at 1059, 1062–63. Further, the conditional language did not recite or summarize 2 a statute. The Ninth Circuit held, in part, that this conditional language was misleading and 3 thus violated section 1692e(10) of the FDCPA. Id. at 1063. Here, Defendant merely cited 4 to and accurately summarized statutory language without misconstruing the meaning of the 5 statute. Thus, Gonzales is not relevant or applicable.

6 Similarly unpersuasive is Plaintiff’s argument that Defendant’s inclusion of section 7 1788.21 violates the FDCPA because it misleads the least sophisticated debtor into 8 believing that Defendant is a creditor rather than a debt collector. In its debt collection 9 letter, Defendant never identifies itself as the creditor. Rather, Defendant’s letter clearly 10 states that Cardiology Associates Medical is the creditor, that Plaintiff’s account has been 11 assigned to Defendant for collection, and that Defendant is a collection agency. (ECF 36-12 3 at 2.) Defendant’s letter simply summarizes section 1788.21 and the potential 13 requirements it sets forth between Plaintiff and the creditor, which Defendant never 14 purports to be.

15 In sum, the Court finds that Defendant did not violate the FDCPA by including in 16 its debt collection letter an accurate summary of section 1788.21.

17 C. ROSENTHAL ACT

18 The Rosenthal Act is California’s version of the FDCPA. See CAL. CIV. CODE §§ 19 1788 et seq. The Rosenthal Act “mimics or incorporates by reference the FDCPA’s 20 requirements . . . and makes available the FDCPA’s remedies for violations.” Riggs v.
 21 Prober & Raphael, 681 F.3d 1097, 1100 (9th Cir. 2012). Accordingly, whether an act 22 “violates the Rosenthal Act turns on whether it violates the FDCPA.” Id. “Rosenthal Act 23 violations and FDCPA violations are viewed identically.” Horowitz v. GC Servs. Ltd., No.
 24 14-cv-2512-MMA (RBB), 2015 WL 1959377, at *9 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 28, 2015). Thus, for 25 the same reasons that Defendant did not violate the FDCPA, the Court finds that Defendant 26 did not violate the Rosenthal Act.

27 ///

28 ///

1           D. PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT IN FAVOR OF DEFENDANT

2           Additionally, the Court enters partial summary judgment sua sponte for Defendant.
 3 Rule 56(f) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure states that “[a]fter giving notice and a 4 reasonable time to respond, the court may: (1) grant summary judgment for a nonmovant.” 5 FED. R. CIV. PROC. 56(f)(1). The Ninth Circuit has clarified this power to mean that “where 6 the party moving for summary judgment has had a full and fair opportunity to prove its 7 case, but has not succeeded in doing so, a court may enter summary judgment for the 8 nonmoving party.” Albino v. Baca, 747 F.3d 1162, 1176 (9th Cir. 2014) (citations omitted).

9           Here, in bringing his motion for partial summary judgment, Plaintiff presented to the 10 Court all facts and arguments as to why Defendant’s letter violated the FDCPA and the 11 Rosenthal Act by summarizing section 1788.21. The material facts presented were 12 undisputed by the parties, so no further factual determinations are necessary. Instead, the 13 sole issue at hand was a question of law. As noted above, the Court determined that 14 Defendant’s letter did not violate the FDCPA or the Rosenthal Act by summarizing section 15 1788.21. Because Plaintiff has had “a full and fair opportunity to prove its case, but has not 16 succeeded in doing so,” it is appropriate to sua sponte grant partial summary judgment in 17 favor of Defendant regarding Plaintiff’s FDCPA and Rosenthal Act claims based on the 18 inclusion of a summary of section 1788.21 in the debt collection letter. See id.

19           VI. CONCLUSION

20           For the reasons set forth herein, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED:

- 21           1. Plaintiff’s motion for partial summary judgment (ECF No. 36) is DENIED;
- 22           2. Partial summary judgment is sua sponte GRANTED in favor of Defendant 23 regarding Plaintiff’s FDCPA and Rosenthal Act claims based on Defendant’s 24 inclusion of a summary of section 1788.21 in the debt collection letter; and
- 25           3. In light of Diaz v. Kubler Corp., 785 F.3d 1326 (9th Cir. 2015), Plaintiff is 26 ORDERED TO SHOW CAUSE why his remaining two claims—violation 27 of the FDCPA and the Rosenthal Act based on Defendant’s demand in the 28 debt collection letter for interest on Plaintiff’s debt —should not be dismissed.

1 To do so, Plaintiff shall file and serve a memorandum of points and authorities 2 on or before April 3, 2017. Defendant may file a response thereto on or before 3 April 10, 2017. Thereafter, the Court will take this matter under submission 4 pursuant to Civil Local Rule 7.1(d)(1). No oral argument or personal 5 appearances shall be made unless otherwise ordered.

6 IT IS SO ORDERED.

7 Dated: March 20, 2017

8
9 DAVID H. BARTICK
United States Magistrate Judge